Revised Reasons for Allowance

Applicant's remarks of January 9, 2006 are essentially agreed to.

In the examiner's opinion, the prior art neither discloses, nor fairly suggests, a desk pad and an organizer tray formed from a plurality of superimposed board members with an extension portion and attaching means for attaching the desk pad to the extension portion.

In interpreting the language "means for attaching said desk pad to said extension portion, adjacent to said tray portion" in claim 20, the location of the "means for attaching" (e.g., adhesive) is not construed to be located only on the extension portion. Claim 20 does not limit the location of the "means for attaching" and the location of the "means for attaching" forms no part in the reasons for allowance.
